THE VIRDEN ADVANCE.

VOLUME III. VIRDEN, MAN., THURSDAY, JAN. 12, 1888. C. J. ATKINSON, Proprietor. NO. 37. W. H. HALL, Editor and Manager.

THE WEEK'S NEWS.

CANADIAN.

Buffalo have recently been seen in the district one hundred miles west of Battleford.

The opening of Parliament is considered likely to be delayed by the adjournment of the Fisheries Commission.

Eight thousand immigrants arrived at the Quebec depot during the past season, of which all but about two hundred and fifty have been provided with employment.

A number of gentlemen interested in the scheme for the erection of a Canadian Horse mart in Toronto and formed "The Improved Canadian Draught Horse Association."

The municipalities of Prescott county are to receive grants of $10,000 and $40,000, respectively, in aid of schemes for running colonists through the country.

A cable message from Ireland to the effect that Government has tendered to Grant Brothers, of Toronto, the contract for the supply of 1,000 horses, principally for the British Dragoons, in Canada, and that the contract will be given to them, but with a fine hope that it will grow brighter and brighter, until that happy day when hon. John Carling, of London, Ontario, will be seated with 117 decks, Ottawa's total for the month was 51, Hudson Bay's total, upward of 100.

A Chicago cable on Sunday morning an attempt was made to blow up the house of Dr. Michel, Rue Sainte Sacrement, Quebec, by means of a bomb loaded with plus powder. Bailiff Canfield, who lives with the owner, had a narrow escape from being hurt. Anti-papal sentiments are said to have been made use of.

Committees appointed by the Hamilton City Council and Wentworth County Council have decided on a joint action to apply to the Government for the guarantee of the county rail way bonds, which it is stated, it is hoped, will be forthcoming shortly, and that the city should pay nearly per cent. of the interest, which is only another way come to be waged, just as dead-ing, to satisfy the holders of the bonds.

Sir Lyon Playfair, of Scotland, representing two hundred and thirty-five members of the House of Commons, recently visited the United States on an errand of a very delicate character. The leaders of the Parliamentary party of that land was Sir Lyon Playfair, who has several times sat in the English Ministry.

The delegation waited upon the President at Washington, and presented to him a memorial in favor of "arbitration in political matters, which was, it is said, but failed to secure him definitive. Sir Lyon Playfair intimated that the times are favorable to such a course, since "the whole world is startled at the new aspect of war, which the progress of science is making a huge engine for the butchery of men, and the wanton waste of property." He added the startling fact that during the past ten years alone, the cost of maintaining European armies has risen at least twenty-five per cent.

The President responded in a sympathetic manner, and expressed the hope that arbitration might one day be generally adopted.

It is thought that such a scheme should be taken up by the independent Anglo-Saxon powers, and that an effort should be made by enlightened nations to devise a peaceful method of settling the disputes which are constantly arising between foreign powers.

The stand striking example ever set in this direction was that of the United States and England, when they agreed that the claims for damages, growing out of the Alabama affair, should be referred to a tribunal of arbitration, which, strange to say, consisted of six Britishers, six Yankees, and one Swiss! Strange, that the Alabama claims, which, if arbitrated, would have cost Uncle Sam, and the people of the United States, hundreds of millions of dollars, in the shape of damages, should be arbitrated, and the Yankees, instead of having to pay, in the shape of damages, a large sum, they had to receive a large sum, and that without a quarrel.

One of the great obstacles in the way of the adoption of arbitration, for the settlement of International disputes, is the matter of refusing to submit a question in which the honor of a country is involved.

A contingent view that the Imperial Government never agreed to the proposal for putting into operation a scheme for the wholesale importation of 1,000 horses manufactured, industries are ruined; and yet as the cost of it all, the needs of foreign quarters, not home, are to be supplied.

Two hundred years ago, a French king seized and ruled the Palatinate, which is in the realm. The Germans never did, however, make common cause heartily in defending it from the French, and it was, in the end, taken back by force. With this again, the French are not satisfied; and, they are, at this time, watching their opportunity to recommit the provinces.

Many more examples might be taken from history to show how unless even the ordinary rules of war, the peace, being settlement between nations. The history of peaceful arbitration, on the other hand, by diplomacy or by reference to a court of arbitration, shows that the cases have been brought to an end by the adjustment of the matter in dispute.

Bailiff Canfield, who lives with the owner, may come to be waged, just as dead-ing, to satisfy the holders of the bonds.

Sir Lyon Playfair, President of the Oldham Chamber of Commerce, has offered to pay over to the company all the property and bonds in the city, which is $20,000, on the condition that the Government of England, and the United States, settle their differences in this way. TT years of great good fortune would.

The Terrible Disaster in China.

If the news just received from Hong Kong be authentic, it is the most terrible in modern times has inflicted the people who inhabit the lower part of the valley of the Hoang-Ho. This great river has again burst its banks, a large and densely populated district has been overflowed, and the miserable inhabitants have lost millions of property and thousands of their lives. The district is has now flooded extends for depth of its recent inundation, is 100 miles long and 40 miles wide, which the river flooded. Thousands upon thousands have perished, and the loss of life in the valley of the Hoang-Ho, which is the most populous part of the Celestial Empire, is beyond all precedent

THURSDAY, JAN. 12th, 1888.

WELCOME INSTITUTION.

As before intimated, Virden is to have a bank, in fact has one, for Mr. Adamson, of Adamson & Co., arrived here last Friday evening and opened up business in Mr. A. G. McDonald's office, where he will remain until the new bank building is completed. It is needless to point out the great benefit such an institution will be to the county, for it has been patent to everyone for a long time past that in such a business centre as Virden is such an institution was a mere fly. Success to the enterprise.

WALLACE COUNCIL.

The last meeting of 1887 Council was held in Virden last Tuesday, Reeve Frame in the chair, when the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The new Council then met, Reeve Frame in the chair and the following Councillors present: Cushing, Angus, Younge, Joslin, Crosby and McDonald, sr.

Several communications and accounts were read by the Clerk.

Angus—Crosby—That W. H. McDougall be Clerk. Lost.

Younge—Cushing—That A. G. McDougall be Clerk. Carried.

Joslin—Crosby—That A. Austin be Treasurer. Carried.

Angus—McDonald—That W. J. Wilcox be Treasurer. Lost.

Angus—Crosby—That Mr. Scallion be Auditor. Carried.

Joslin—Young—That H. H. Read be Auditor. Lost.

McDonald—Cushing—That Mr. Menzies be Auditor. Lost.

Chas. McLean was appointed auditor by the Reeve.

Crosby—Joslin—That Scallion Bros. be allowed to perform their road work for this year. Carried.

Cushing—McDonald—That the salary for Clerk be $125, that the salary for Treasurer be $150, that the fee to Auditors be $3 each, and that the Treasurer furnish a bond from the Guarantee Co., say for one thousand dollars and satisfactory bondsmen for same amount as before. Carried.

Cushing—Angus—That J. S. Wood be appointed assessor for the municipality for 1888, at a salary of $50. Carried.

Crosby—McDonald—That Chas. McLean be appointed auditor for 1888. Lost.

Coun. McDonald gave notice he would introduce a by-law voting by ballot at municipal elections. Also a by-law imposing a license upon transient traders and auctioneers.

Angus—Crosby—That the regular meetings of this Council be held on the first Tuesday in each month. Carried.

McDonald—Crosby—That $1.65 of A. J. McLean's taxes be remitted. Carried.

McDonald—Younge—That the Treasurer be instructed to refund the overcharge in taxes to Wilcox & Co. Carried.

Cushing—McDonald—That J. H. Agnew be solicitor for the ensuing year on same terms as last year. Carried.

Cushing—Young—That the Clerk be instructed to have the municipal seal repaired without delay. Carried.

Crosby—Joslin—That Rule No. 11 be suspended to allow By-law 63 to be introduced. Carried.

The council formed committee of the whole, Coun. Cushing in the chair, when By-law 63 was read, and upon the Reeve resuming the chair it was read a third time and passed.

Coun. Younge gave notice that he would at next meeting of council introduce a by-law to define the duties of Clerk, Treasurer and Assessor.

Council then adjourned to meet first Tuesday in February.

A. G. MCDOUGALL, Clerk.

MINIOTA COUNCIL.

The last meeting of the above Council for the present year was held at the Beulah Hall, Beulah, on the 27th December.

COMMUNICATIONS

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but are willing to give room to the pro and con of any time for the discussion of public questions.

We shall not publish any letter unless accompanied with the name and address of the writer, not necessarily intended for publication.

BRIARWOOD.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

Weather continues stormy in this neighborhood and the snow is getting very deep. If the present weather continues much longer the farmers will suffer a blockade from snow and will be unable to haul their grain to market, as the roads are in a very bad condition.

Mr. R. Graham, who broke his collar-bone some time ago, is improving nicely. Dr. Wright, of Oak Lake, set the bone. The Dr. is fast becoming a household word in this part of his practice.

ELKHORN.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

The weekly meeting of the Elkhorn Mutual Improvement Society was held in the Schoolhouse on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, Dr. Holston, President, in the chair. After the reading of "The Breeze" by the Secretary the extemporary debate "Whether is the equine or the bovine pets the more useful to man" was opened, the following gentlemen taking part: Messrs. Rotswell, Cushing, Little and Collings for the equine, and Messrs. Movat, Gilbert, Hanbly and Rothnie for the bovine. The discussion was carried on with much spirit, and many a good mainteine joke was cracked to the amusement of the audience; but it was evident the equine advocates were getting the worst of it, as superiority of straight animals was the only point they could advance in their favor. The debate was then left in the hands of the three judges, Messrs. Taylor, Rowand, and McKenzie, who gave their verdict in favor of the bovine. Next night, Jan. 11th, Mr. Fortune, will deliver a Temperance Lecture, on which discussion will be invited, and it is to be hoped there will be a full attendance.

Wheat still continues to move steadily, even although trails are in a very bad state. About 60,000 bushels have already been delivered here, and it is expected that shipments will reach 100,000 bushels by the close of the season.

Jan. 9th, 1888.

ELM VALLEY.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

R. H. Graham intends to try the threshing again as soon as the weather permits and men can be got together.

The bulk of the grain here is still unthreshed and has every appearance of remaining so.

R. H. Best has gone to Winnipeg for the winter.

J. McBride, of Carberry, has been visiting friends in this vicinity.

Rev. H. Littlehales, Presbyterian missionary, intends taking up land here and will bring out his mother and sisters in the spring.

Miss Emma Best has returned home from Winnipeg.

J. W. Peters, who is attending the Normal school at Winnipeg, spent his holidays at home.

Miss Carrie Bell arrived here from her school on Wednesday.

Those farmers that have threshed have their grain mostly marketed, but according to present indications the ones having to wait will not lose much by it. Grain in its present normal state seems inclined to go up in price, but should the European war cloud burst the future might be one of great possibilities.

Small parties are quite in order now. The winter season is well upon us, and all have plenty of time to enjoy themselves.

The "Governors" have no excuse to offer now when the boys want to go and see the girls, thus relieving the boys of the necessity of having to resort to such expedients as breaking plow handles etc.

Mr. C. H. Shaw has employed T. T. Grimmett to instruct his children during the winter.

OAK LAKE.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

The Rev. Charles Quinney will will on Thursday evening the 19th inst., at Oak Lake, at a public meeting, give his experience and that of Mrs. Quinney while prisoners in the camp of Big Bear Indians, in the Fort Pitt District, during the rebellion, and relate some of the thrilling incidents connected with the rebellion in the North-West, in which Mr. and Mrs. Quinney were prisoners in the hands of the rebels and barely escaped with their lives, which promises to be very interesting and instructive. A small charge of 25 cents will be made to go towards paying off the debt on the organ.

Snow has fallen several times during the past week, and sleighing is now very good, but drifted in some places.

There are four grain buyers now at Oak Lake.

There is much talk lately as to the probability of an early election. There is no conservative candidate named yet as likely to take the field in this County. There was a bungle last time which caused a split in the party. Mr. Rowlinge told your correspondent before he left for England that he would not be a candidate again so we hope that a sound conservative may be induced to contest the riding with Mr. McLean, the present member. The latter is respected because he is an out and out liberal and we know on what side to find him, but we despise a half and half man, sometimes called an independant, which really means a man looking for office.

OAK LAKE MARKETS.—Wheat 53 to 54 cents, Barley 30 cents, Oats 22 cents, Potatoes 50 cents, Butter 22 to 25 cents, Eggs 25 cents, Chickens 10 cents, per lb, Beef 10 cents per lb, Lard 15 cents.

WAPELLA.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

A Happy New Year to all.

The winter has now fairly set in.

Grain, grain, grain, nothing but grain, north, south, east and west.

Cleveland, of the firm of Dibes & Cleveland, is buying for that firm here, and is with his assistant kept pretty busy. Thos. T. Hamill is buying for Hamill & Co. and gets a good share of all that comes in. It is an old adage, but a very true one, that "honesty is the best policy" and Cleveland & Dibes and Hamill & Co. have proved it by giving good weight, and grading fair, and in consequence drawing the farmers to Wapella from all points of the compass. T. J. Smith is the financial agent of Hamill and Co., and C. H. Morrison pays out for Cleveland & Dibes.

G. H. M. returned from Brandon yesterday looking awfully happy over something, but went say whether the day is fixed or not.

Mr. Ashton, bailiff of the International, fell down the cellar on Monday evening and was badly bruised but will be all right, we hope, in a couple of weeks. It appears Mr. A. was descending the cellar stairs for some milk when her foot slipped, precipitating her to the bottom. Everyone who knows the lady is glad to know matters are no worse, as Mrs. Ashton is a lady well liked by all who have the pleasure of her acquaintance.

The new club have decided upon having their first dance shortly, when the creme de la creme will, upon the production of credentials and $3, be granted a ticket. Dress suits, or at least long-tailed coats, will be caeme il faut.

Frank says he likes Charlie more every day.

The Wapella Agricultural show takes place on Oct. 2nd. Applications should be addressed to T. T. Law, Sec.-Treas., Box 270, Wapella.

Donald Black, alias Jack Wolesley, attending Supreme Court.

W. Geake and F. Turner are still loading hay.

C. Page expects to be through with his contract with T. J. in two weeks.

M. M. McArthur is turning out A 1 jumpers like hot cakes, giving great satisfaction both with workmanship and price.

Abolish The Manitoba Gazette.

The abolition of this nuisance ought to engage the attention of the Legislature at its approaching session. There may be a few reasons why the Provincial Government should have an official paper, but there are more and stronger reasons why it should not assume the form of the Manitoba Gazette, which is so operated that it is nothing more than a leech upon our money from the pockets of the people. It is an indirect tax upon every municipality that has lands to sell for taxes or requires official notices; upon every property owner who desires to put his property under the Torrens System; and it increases the cost of land system; and upon every poor devil who gets into the hands of the sheriff, as well as upon other persons and corporations that might be mentioned. If the Government wants an official medium through which to present to the public the few announcements it has from time to time to make, let it have its Gazette and pay for the printing of it, but there is no reason why banks, municipalities, corporations and persons should be taxed by having to advertise everything in the Gazette and also in the newspapers. The newspapers are the proper places for public notices, and the publication of notices in the newspapers is sufficient. Very few people get the Manitoba Gazette and very few who get it ever look at it. This is a reform that the Harrison Government can easily make, and one that will cause every municipal corporation in the Province and thousands of people to rise up and call them blessed. If they do not abolish it they deserve to be thrown out of office.—Emerson International.

Rev. Mr. Silcox Attacks the Government.

On Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Silcox of Winnipeg, preached his annual sermon in memoriam of the departed year, this particular one being distinguished as "The Graves of 1887." Towards the close of the sermon the Rev. gentleman spoke on the present political situation, the following extract being taken from the Winnipeg Call's report of the sermon:—

Speaking of politics he expressed his firm conviction that he was only proper and just that young men should take an interest in the welfare of the state in which they lived. He believed that the welfare of the nation should weigh constantly upon the intelligence of every citizen, especially of every christian citizen. For men who did God's Will in the parliaments of the world he had the highest regard. The Christian statesman was confident in his God no less than the christian apostle. The truths that Christ taught must be incorporated, but only in the individual life, but in the national life as well. Referring to the political situation in the province he said: "What this province of Manitoba needs, sorely needs just now, is men of ability, men of truth and men of honor, to lift the province out of the mire though fair which it has been dragged by politicians politicians and lift it to a respectable position before the world. We are in a sorry, shameful plight to-day. Men who were the leaders have left the ship floundering on the shoals and are asking Parliament to pass special laws to make them lawyers; time they will make the noble profession of the law a sewer pit for smirched politicians. How art thou fallen oh justice and law. As a citizen and as one who has loved this province, and I know I speak for many, I feel humiliated when I consider the present condition of the province. We are the colony of a colony; the dependent of a dependency and our rulers are willing to have it so. The province has been trampled upon and spat upon by a large bull-dozing corporation and our leaders have not had the manliness to resent the insult, but like whipped dogs they have licked the hand that made them. They have proved themselves either incompetent or criminal, or both, and are not worthy to represent a people who possess the spirit and independence that have characterized Anglo-Saxons the world over. It would be an unspeakable blessing to the land if some strong man should arise and go into the Legislature, as Oliver Cromwell once did, and drive the whole kitten, or other to make room for capable, honest men. If it is true that a nation is known by the character of the men that it elects to office, what will the world think of us."

RICHLY REWARDED are those who will read, ponder and then act; those who are honorable, industrious may find work that will more than double their income. The business we offer is the largest and best for every industrious person, and we prove it. We are now making several hundred dollars a month. It is easy for any one to make $5 and upward per day, who is willing to work. Either sex; young or old; capital not needed; we start you. Everything new. No special ability required; you, reader, can do it as well as any. Write to us at once for all particulars, which we will mail free. Address Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine.

There is no doubt about this. The Farmer has his hand on the money bag of the Country. Until the Farmer markets his grain the merchants and the machine men must wait for their money. For the north-west the Farmers will have their innings, although they have been holding for a long time. PHOTOGRAPHY.—Mr. A. D. Cooper wishes to inform his friends and patrons that he will be leaving Virden on the 1st of February for a few months during which time his studio will be closed.

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.—We should be obliged of our several correspondents would keep us well posted in events going on in their districts from time to time, not forgetting the births, deaths and marriages.

NEW LUMBER BUSINESS.—We understand that Mr. John Mooney, who has withdrawn from the firm of Wyatt & Co., intends, with a partner, opening up a lumber yard and hardware business in the course of a few weeks.

EXCHEQUER RESIGNED.—Mr. A. G. McDougall has resigned his position as Exchequer for the County of Dennis, which resignation has been accepted. Mr. John Parr, of Brandon line, has been appointed to fill the position thus made vacant.

DEBATING SOCIETY.—On account of the Social in the town hall next Wednesday evening there will be no meeting of the Debating Society. The debate for the following Wednesday will be "Resolved that an Absolute Monarchy becomes less to form the Republic."

ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting of the Virden Presbyterian congregation will be held in the Wesleyan hall next Wednesday, the 18th inst., at 11 o'clock. At the close of the meeting tea will be served by the ladies and a social time spent. Ladies are requested to bring baskets.

COMMITTEE MEETING.—Last Monday a meeting of the Executive Committee of the County of Dennis Conservative Association was held in Virden for the purpose of electing a President, to act until the Hamilton annual meeting, Mr. T. Routledge having resigned. Mr. J. P. Fraser, of Virden, was elected to the office.

DISSATISFACTION EXPRESSED.—A great deal of dissatisfaction is being expressed by the farmers at the prices paid for wheat at this point, and not without cause, for during the whole of the present season Oak Lake buyers have been paying some 2 to 3 cents per bushel more than the Virden buyers, and the Hargrave buyers are also paying more.

WILL GIVE HIS EXPERIENCE.—We understand that the Rev. Chas. Quinney will, next (Thursday) evening, Jan. 12th, in the Presbyterian Church, Oak Lake, give an account of his experience with Big Bear and Indians during his own and wife's captivity among them in the rebellion of 1885. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged, which will go to pay of debt on organ.

ELECTION IN ASSINIBOIA.—The election of a member of the Local Legislature took place in Assiniboia last Tuesday. The candidates were Mr. Frank Ness (Government) and Mr. McArthur (Independent). The fight has been short (about ten days) but severe. A dispatch was received here last Tuesday evening to the effect that Mr. McArthur had been elected by a majority of 55 votes.

TO THE FARMERS.—At the annual meeting of the Dennis Agricultural Society, it was decided to hold meetings of farmers during the winter months for the purpose of discussing practical subjects of interest to farmers. The first meeting will be held in the Virden Town Hall next Tuesday, the 17th inst., at 13:30 o'clock sharp, when Mr. Elder, the president of the Society will read a paper on "Summer Fallow," and Mr. A. G. McDougall will read one on "Hail Insurance." These papers will be followed by a general discussion on the subjects. There should be a large turn out of farmers, as these are subjects that affect every agriculturist in the district.

LITTLE LOCALS.

—Lots of snow on the ground now.

—The roads are very heavy for drawing grain.

—Get your friends to subscribe for the Virden ADVANCE.

—Mr. Adamson, banker, arrived here last Friday evening.

—Mr. Peter Lynk left for Ontario last Friday to spend a few weeks there.

—The Councils of the different municipalities hold their first meeting last Tuesday.

—Rev. R. Currie intends discussing the question found in 1 Kings XIX. 9, next Sabbath evening.

The Rev. J. H. L. Joslyn will preach next Sunday afternoon at S. Sparrow, and at Virden in the evening.

—Mr. W. G. Elworthy left for Winnipeg last Sunday to consult a physician, his health being far from good.

—A Memorial Sermon will be preached next Sunday, at 11 o'clock, relating to Mary Ann Leverington, deceased, at Mr. Mathews' residence, Pipestone.

—VIRDEN has got a brass band, and we heard them play the "Rose of Allendale," when it was twenty below zero. That's pluck for you.—Moosomin Courier.

—Mr. Thos. Topp left for his old home in Ontario last Friday, where he will remain for about two months. He intends bringing a car of stock with him when he returns.

—Mr. F. Norsworthy, who has been in Winnipeg for the last year, returned to Virden last Monday, he having been appointed agent at this point for the Watson Manufacturing Co.

—Mr. M. Leach, of Leach Bros. who lately got their mill burned down at Oak Lake, was in the city yesterday, sizing up the chances of his firm getting sufficient inducements to erect their mill here instead of at Oak Lake. The Messrs. Leach are prepared if these inducements are offered to erect here in the spring a 200 barrel mill and to do grinding on strictly grinding principles. We hope they will be encouraged in their ambitious.—Dominion Times.

—When a man comes into the office and plunks down the cash and says, "send me your paper for a year," that means business. If I want your paper, but haven't the money now," that's all right. When he takes off one of the postoffice envelopes several months and sends it back "refused," that's meanness. When a man spends from ten cents to a dollar for cigars or beer a week, and says he can't afford to take his own home paper, that's a—no such thing. When a man borrows his neighbor's paper to read every week, that's check.—Plattsburgh Leader.

Blundered With the Gun.

TORONTO, ONT., Jan. 8.—Hugh Jamieson, of Brooklea, who has been on a visit to relatives in Toronto, called last night and did another day's work. P. McFarrin, who on retiring to rest last night placed his gun in the hall, this morning he was found dead in bed, having turned it on again. He was about 50 and leaves a wife and nine children.

Gone to Her Rest.

We regret to announce the death of Annie, fourth daughter of Mr. James Leverington, an extensive farmer on the Pipestone, which sad event took place on the 5th inst. For the last year back she has been suffering from lung disease, the affliction getting more severe during the last few weeks. Miss Leverington was a very promising young lady. Not only in the home circle, of which she was the life, but by all who knew her she was beloved and esteemed. The Community will long miss her bright and cheerful presence. The family have the sympathy of the entire Community in their sad bereavement. The funeral took place on the 11th inst. and was attended by a goodly number. The Rev. Mr. Joslyn will preach a memorial sermon at the residence of Mr. John Mathews next Sunday.

The Garden.

For the management of vegetable gardens and flower beds, the seed growing the culture of flowers for Min and information concerning all kinds of seeds, planting and cultivation in the garden and flowers, D. M. Ferry & Co.'s Seed Annual for 1888 will be found as complete as any such of a small exhibitor ever issued. The variety and excellence of the large information given renders Ferry's Annual worthy the special attention of every one interested in having delicious vegetables or beautiful flowers. D. M. Ferry & Co. rank in the growing and sale of Onion Seed, leading specialty, and give some interesting information on onion culture so as to make their Annual of permanent value to all onion growers and gardeners. The Annual can be had for the asking. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

Vick's Floral Guide.

A silver lining to every cloud! With the short dull days of early winter cause the cheery holidays and Vick's beautiful annual, and its spring already appears not so distant. We can almost see the growing grass and the blooming flowers. In the way of Catalogue, Vick's Floral Guide is unequalled in artistic appearance, and the edition of each year that appears simply perfect, is surpassed the next. New and beautiful engravings, and three colored plates of flowers, vegetables, and grain, are features for the issue for 1888. Its invitation, tinted cover, with original designs of most pleasing effects, will ensure it a prominent place in the household and library. It is itself a treatise on horticulture, and is adapted to the wants of all who are interested in the garden or house plants. All for a dime (cost 10 cents) Published by James Vick, Seedsman, Rochester, N. Y.

CHAPTER XI.

Poor Peggy felt, as the door of the salon closed behind her and she crept with downcast head along the hall, as if the last faint inducement to continue to exist had gone. As she sneaked along the hall, blind and deaf to everything but her own unspeakable humiliation, she suddenly felt a hand laid gently on her arm just when she passed through the doorway which led to the staircase. Into startled with a low cry of scorn her. It was only Gerald, who was looking kind and sympathetic. He had just returned from Calais, and was taking off his driving-gloves.

"What's the matter, Miss Beresford?"

"O—O—O! Everything's the matter. I—I fell into the water, and M. and Madame Fournier, and—and my father and everybody saw me—all—all over me! I, why mean, I to dance!" she finished, with a burst of sobbed sobs.

"Who is it? What has happened?" asked French a bright man's voice unknown to her.

She turned her head and saw that the last, worst blow of all had fallen. By her side, looking down at her with much amused attentiveness, was a tall, slight, handsome young fellow, a little too showily dressed for an English gentleman, who was twirling a very small dark mustache into neat upturned points, and smiling serenely as if it were the only possible expression for one's face when looking at a woman.

"Mdlle. Beresford!" he asked, still smiling, with his head inquiringly on one side, as he examined the long, wavy, shaded little person, of his future bride.

"May I introduce M. Victor Fournier?" said Gerald hastily, in a coaxingly gentle tone, which caused the bridegroom-elect to look at him with raised eyebrows, but without relaxing the chivalrous duty-smile.

It was just as formal, just as ceremonious, gentlemanly, and ghastly finish to a most ghastly incident, that Victor, after making a deep bow, which she answered by a drooping and despondent curtsey, good-naturedly laid his hand, and received, on the lavender gloves he wore for this ceremonious call, the large sum of money Gerald little figure. She saw at once what she had done, but by his time her despair had reached the perfect of recklessness, and she looked up at him with the sullen stare of one for whom misery has exhausted its terrors.

"I am very sorry I have spoilt your glove, monsieur," she said, in slow, halting French; "but you will forgive me to-morrow, when I have left this horrible place."

"Not horrible so long as mademoiselle remains here," said Victor, readily, with another bow, bravely keeping up the smile in the face of circumstances. "I have the pleasure to hope that this delightful place will long be enlivened by mademoiselle's presence."

The idea of her presence enlivening any place just now was such an unmistakable joke that Peggy looked up with a fiercely little curl of the lips which was meant for a smile. Gerald, who felt that the situation was growing more and more painful, looked at her who "was afraid that she was going to laugh," and broke into a fit of apparently disconcerting laughter, stopped only by his cousin's giving his arm a pinch that set his teeth, and gave her a little frantic at push toward the staircase.

"Adieu, mademoiselle," said she, with a strong British accent, bowing to Victor.

"Au revoir, mademoiselle," said he bending low to her.

And Gerald, thrust his arm through that of his cousin, and drew her back to the hall, while Peggy wenton to her own room, and began taking off her best white with a defiant determination to take the final departure from "Les Bouleaux" in it as soon as the way opened. She was desperate at the thought of speedy action, and before she had time to reflect, or to strengthen herself in what she had begun to stagger to herself in a dazed way, she was at her bedroom door, and had opened and drawn her by a pulling of mechanical, open defiance. She was quaking with the first terror of her act, and for the third time, when a sharp, precise little voice sounded at her ear, saying:

"Who is it?" she called out in the "Vagabond" manner.

"It is I, Miss M'Leod," said a thin voice. "Can I come in, Miss Beresford?"

Miss Beresford stepped across the waxed floor with a sullen and reluctant "indeed the door." And admitted the writer hastily. Miss M'Leod was haughty too, and being even smaller than the younger lady, she had to tilt back her head to a very painful angle in order not to be outdone in the matter of supercilious scorn.

"I have come, by Mr. Staunton's desire, to require whether it is your intention to depart in the same premises to the departing of M. and Madame Fournier and their son, and whether, in the event of affirmative, any assistance in the matter of preparation for the journey is required."

"No, I've seen quite enough of them. If my father sent for me, you can tell him I shall come."

The housekeeper raised her eyeglass, and returned the girl's frowning look by a searching stare of her little light eyes which was meant to express contempt. Then she turned and was sweeping toward the door, when her dignation was checked by a sudden sense of the piteousness of the shivering, tears forced miserable little figure before her, trying to force back her head and to bear a brave front while the mud and the water still dripped from her spoilt dress, and her teeth chattered with the cold. Then there was a knock at the door, and they heard Gerald's voice.

"Miss Beresford! Margaret! Peggy!" he called impatiently. "Come out and speak to me; I want to speak to you."

Miss Beresford flushed to the deep red that her face spread at some inward pretence.

"O Gerald," she cried, in a vehement reproach, "why did you send this woman up to me? Don't you think I've enough to cope with? Do make her come out, do take her away!"

Gerald thrust his hand through the crack, and Peggy instantly put her fingers into his with a pleading, half-forgiven look.

"Miss M'Leod, what have you been saying to her? Kiss her, tell her you didn't mean to be unkind, and help her to dress as quickly as ever you can, as you promised," said he, with eager volubility. "You know you said you'd lend her something to wear. And, Peggy, do be good, there's a dear girl, and dress and come down. Say you will—quick—in three minutes."

He drummed and tapped at the door affectionately as he spoke, and Miss M'Leod took the opportunity to make conciliatory advances on the other side; so after some excited remonstrance on the part of Peggy, Gerald was sent to call Delphine, who was active if not particularly neat-fingered, and the little scene ended by her being brought from her room a black silk dress of her own, and some straight, twisted lace, and a gold necklace, she and Delphine proceeded to array the reluctant Miss Beresford in them, and to pin and fold and to fasten the borrowed garments until Peggy, as she was led into the corridor where Gerald was anxiously waiting for her, looked like a rather little stage Pantina, in a dress which was very short for her in front and very long behind.

"Now you look lovely," whispered Gerald, with honest admiration, as he allowed Miss M'Leod to pass them down the stairs, and followed with Peggy's arm tightly in his; "and Victor will be delighted with you, and it will be all right. Mind you don't fail," he added tenderly—he didn't know how nervous she was—as he took her by down the stairs and acting her apparance with much pride. "You don't know how ratched it made me to see you look so unhappy; and I felt I would have done anything, anything to make it all right again for you."

And they stopped at the foot of the stairs.

"Oh Gerald, you are a dear good fellow," said Peggy gratefully, screwing up one of his hands in both hers, and looking at him with penitent affection. "You've made everything seem different; you've made that little scamp's Miss M'Leod angelically good to me; and now I feel as if I could be happy and not a bit afraid of those dreadful Fournier. And I will try to please them—to please you. You've just been a brother to me, indeed you are."

So he took the fraternal privilege quite simply and naturally, and was surprised and a little hurt when she shrank back as he kissed her cheek.

"Are you angry? Don't be offended with me. You would be just your brother kiss you."

"I—I don't know," said she rather shyly. "Nobody has ever kissed me before."

Gerald had nothing to say to this, but he believed it; and it gave him a great deal to think about afterward. He lingered there with her for a moment, with a quiet, shy, shrewdness, chuckling laugh above their heads when them both look up, to discover Delphine craning her neck over the top of the staircase till she was blue in the face, to get a good view of Gerald.

"Come along, Peggy," he said hastily. And he crossed the hall, and opened the salon door, and whispered, "Go as bright as you can," as with a beat beneath his very fast, and a terrible feeling of heinous conduct she had to atone for, passed him, and went into the room.

Miss M'Leod had already heralded her appearance, and the bridegroom-elect was so fresh and charming, with the bright color brought by shame and excitement to her pleasant face, and the humbled pleading look in her eyes, as her father, after a mollified pause at her, introduced her to Madame M. and Madame Fournier, that the reception of her first bride-like entrance was served to enhance the good impression she now made by her gentle self-possessed manner; and Madame Fournier's good-natured, honest, commonplace Flamish woman, whose dot had been her chief attraction in her husband's eyes when he married her, but who had long acquired boundless empire over him, drew the girl toward her in a motherly manner to which she was quite unaccustomed, and asked if she could look upon her as upon the mother she had lost.

Mr. Beresford noticed the good humor in his daughter was making Gerald grow quite joyous over it; Victor, indifferent as he was, seemed relieved by the change in his bride-elect. The stiffness of the ceremonious call was lost in the alignment of circumstances which attended it, and the incident of Peggy had grown into a most heroic, romantic girl, who had boldly and resolutely checked the cheating designs and treachery of a good honest lad, who, for the whole party from love and marriage, had sent compatriots to be hooted and shot to robbery and outrage. Yet the intruder was good-hearted enough; and it was only the unfortunate feeling of jealousy circumstance which had caused him to be sent for which cost a cleed upon the shoulders of plump little Mr. Smith, with his round black head and twinkling black eyes, walking briskly into the room.

In the pause which followed his greetings the Fournier were to take leave, and while Mr. Beresford, who had not yet recovered from the fatigue of his long journey from Nice, took advantage of their departure to retire to his own room as the lamp was brought in, the Fournier, with a sigh of relief left to themselves, gradually became silent and thoughtful. The idea of the robbery in theory was that the robbery had been arranged between the Fournier and the chief of the railway company, one of whom had been to Nice to make the arrangements, and the other himself was charging for it, and he suggested that if Victor and his friends, the guard himself who, accounted to be the chief, had been the trusted agent, it would be no difficult matter to carry the scheme into effect. "The Vagabond" had had a fortnight's warning, and had awaited himself of this accomplishment to execute the robbery at a moment's notice prepared. The weakest point in this theory was the difficulty of suggesting any means by which the servants of the family concerned could have learnt that Mr. Blair had any valuable jewels about them, a fact which was only known to Lord Kingsford, Mr. Gerald, and perhaps to M. de Revenel.

The theory, such as it was, served for discussion until the appearance of another visitor, M. Durand, one of the parish; a devoted admirer and adherent of Mr. Beresford, whose philosophy he took as a text, and whose lavish charity he held up as an evidence of true religion, which, while saving the soul of the donor from the sin of hoarding, preserved the bodies of his poorer co-parishioners from the pinch of cold and hunger; a trial which the simple-minded curé was not yet wise enough to undertake. He, too, had to hear the story of the railway robbery and be differed alongside from the linguist, Mr. Smith and the priest, Mr. Blair, being inclined to attribute the misfortune solely to supernatural agency.

"Our unhappy country is most clearly accursed during these latter years," said the old man, whose eyes, shining brightly out of his worn, parched, and shrivelled face, burned with the fire of strange bullets shot out up among the peasants, whose friend and servant he had been so long. "France is suffering for the sin of rejecting her Saviour and insulting her Church. Both these institutions are of God, and can in be wondered at that when a nation casts off His service, it should fall under the dominion of the devil!"

"But the devil can find no use for bankers," said Mr. Smith, with a twinkling smile. "Do, do! I'm sorry to be obliged to make a joke, but I'm sorry to be obliged to make a joke, but I'm sorry to be obliged to make a joke, but
